Rumsfeld thanks NATO base for support

Defense secretary stops at NATO Air Base Geilenkirchen to personally laud base's role in war against terrorism

By Tech. Sgt. Rich Romero
52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld stopped briefly June 7 at a small NATO base in Germany to thank the airmen there for "overwhelming" support following Sept. 11.

Addressing two hot topics on the defense secretary's agenda, the war on terrorism and relations between India and Pakistan, Rumsfeld recently wrapped up a 10-day trip spanning Europe, Southwest Asia and the Middle East.

While the bulk of his agenda took place unnoticed to most of the men and women at Spangdahlem Air Base and its geographically separated units, Rumsfeld included on his trip the stop at NATO

Air Base Geilenkirchen. The small installation of about 1,000 people from 13 nations, 170 of whom are attached to the 52nd Fighter Wing, played an historic role in the war on terrorism.

NATO sent five of its NATO Airborne Early Warning and Control Force E-3A Component aircraft, along with aircrew members from the base in Germany, to Tinker Air Force Base, Okla., to free America's radar planes for operations against terrorism elsewhere in the world, according to Gen. Joseph W. Ralston, supreme allied commander, Europe, when the announcement was first made to send the assets.

Alliance officials said the event marked the first time in the organization's 52-year history NATO assets had been used to protect the United States. The move followed the terrorist attacks on America after which NATO invoked Article 5 of its chapter, which stipulates an attack on one NATO nation is considered an attack on all 18-member nations.

Major Gen. Michael Wooley takes command of 3rd Air Force

By Capt. Erin Bradley
3rd Air Force Public Affairs Office

ROYAL AIR FORCE MILDENHALL, England — Major Gen. Michael W. Wooley accepted the mantle of 3rd Air Force leadership from Maj. Gen. Kenneth W. Hess June 7, with U.S. Air Forces in Europe Commander Gen. Gregory S. Martin officiating.

Although the parting event marked a bittersweet occasion for Hess and 3rd AF personnel, everyone was upbeat and excited about what the future holds.

"As President Dwight D. Eisenhower once said, 'History does not long entrust the care of freedom to the weak or timid,' and the people of 3rd Air Force repeatedly stepped forward with pride and strength," Hess said. "My wife Deb and I thank every one of you for your help, your loyalty and your friendship that you've given us during these two remarkable years. We will carry the memory of our time at 3rd Air Force in our heads, and hearts, forever."

Hess, accompanied by his wife and their daughter Jenna, will be taking over as commander of the U.S. Air Force Safety Center, Kirtland Air Force Base, N.M.

Wooley is coming from his position as commander of the Tanker Airlift Control Center, Headquarters Air Mobility Command, Scott Air Force Base, Ill. The TACC is responsible for planning, scheduling and directing a fleet of more than 1,400 aircraft in support of combat delivery and strategic airlift, air refueling and aeromedical operations around the world.

"I'm following a great man who has led this team in accomplishing great things," Wooley said. "You have my assurance that I will do my best to carry on that tradition. I'm looking forward to the diversity of the mission here, to something new every day."

The numbered air force is responsible for all U.S. Air Force operations and support activities in Europe north of the Alps, and in Africa, south of the Sahara. The 3rd Air Force is an integral part of America's commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. (USAFE News Service)

Accidents

By John Keeler
52d Security Forces Squadron
Reports and Analysis

Team Eifel members experienced 16 vehicle accidents in the past week, two of which were major.

The first accident was at the intersection of Südring and Mötschstraße near the Bitburger Brewery. A security forces squadron investigation found that an American driver failed to yield the right of way before turning left onto Mötschstraße when a local national broad-sided the American-driver's vehicle.

The local national sustained minor neck injuries and was transported to the Bitburg Krankenhaus. Both vehicles were towed from the scene.

The second accident was on L-49 near Arenrath.

An airman who was traveling toward Niersbach slid into the on-coming traffic lane and collided with a local national. A security forces squadron investigation determined the combination of wet roads, excessive speed and braking in the middle of the curve caused the American driver to lose control of the vehicle.

There were no injuries reported. The airman's vehicle sustained front-end damage. The other vehicle sustained only minor damage. The airman's vehicle was towed from the scene.

The 14 minor accidents involved:

- Three from backing.
- Eleven from inattentive driving.

In addition, 23 citations were issued, and two driving-under-the-influence related incidents occurred Saturday, bringing the annual DUI count to 23.

Airman 1st Class Kellar Moore, 23rd Expeditionary Fighter Squadron crew chief, connects a tow bar to a unit F-16CJ while at Incirlik Air Base, Turkey on an Air Expeditionary Force deployment. The unit recently swapped out many of those deployed with people back at Spangdahlem Air Base at the mid-way point of its 90-day rotation supporting Operations Northern Watch. Moore returned during the swap-out and squadron members in Turkey now are scheduled to return in mid-July.

Airmen receive Articles 15, courts-martialed

Nonjudicial punishment, courts-martial sentences handed out during May

(Editor's note: Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice does not specify particular punishments for any offense. Commanders considering nonjudicial punishment consider the nature of the offense; the record of the service member; the needs for good order and discipline; and the effect of nonjudicial punishment of the service member and the service member's record.)

During May, 15 Spangdahlem airmen received nonjudicial punishment under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Also in May, three airmen were convicted in courts-martial, one appeared in the May 17 Eifel Times.

■ A master sergeant violated Article 128 by unlawfully touching and fondling a female airman first class. The commander imposed a reduction to technical sergeant, 30 days extra duty and a reprimand.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a reduction to senior airman and a reprimand.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a reduction to senior airman and a reprimand.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 121 by stealing personal property. The commander imposed a reduction to senior airman.

■ A senior airman violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a reduction to airman first class and 14 days extra duty.

■ A senior airman violated Article 86 by failing to report to work on time and Article 134 by reporting to work intoxicated. The commander imposed a reduction to airman first class, 30 days restriction, 14 days extra duty and a reprimand.

■ A senior airman violated Article 81, by failing to report potentially disqualifying information, Article 92 by failing to maintain car insurance and Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a reduction to airman first class, forfeiture of $250 pay per month for two months and a reprimand.

■ An airman first class violated Article 92 by failing to report drug abuse by other military members. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to airman, suspended forfeiture of $100 pay per month for two months and a reprimand.

■ An airman first class violated Article 92 by failing to report drug abuse by other military members and Article 92 by misusing his government travel card. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to airman, forfeiture of $100 pay per month for two months, 14 days restriction and 14 days extra duty.

■ An airman first class violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a reduction to airman and suspended forfeiture of $200 pay per month for two months.

■ An airman first class violated Article 86 by failing to report for work on time and Article 134 by reporting to work intoxicated. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to airman, forfeiture of $100 pay per month for two months, 15 days extra duty and 15 days restriction.

■ An airman violated Article 107 by saying he paid a dishonored check at Army, Air Force Exchange Service, which was false. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to airman basic, forfeiture of $100 pay, 30 days restriction to Spangdahlem Air Base and 30 days restriction from facilities that serve alcohol, except for official functions, and 14 days extra duty.

■ An airman violated Article 112a by wrongfully using marijuana. The commander imposed a reduction to airman basic, 30 days restriction, 30 days extra duty and a reprimand. The airman is being processed for administrative discharge from the Air Force.

■ An airman violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a reduction to airman basic, suspended forfeiture of $100 pay per month for two months, 15 days extra duty and a reprimand.

■ An airman violated Article 112a by wrongfully using mushrooms. The commander imposed a reduction to airman basic. The airman is being processed for administrative discharge from the Air Force.

Courts-martial

■ An airman from the 606th Air Control Squadron was found guilty in a general court-martial May 17 and sentenced by a judge alone.

Airman First Class Fabian Fortunato was found guilty of wrongfully using and distributing drugs to include marijuana and mushrooms containing psilocybin. Fortunato was found in violation of eight specifications under Article 112a of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Fortunato was sentenced to confinement for one year, reduction to E-1 and a bad conduct discharge.

■ An airman from the 22nd Fighter Squadron was found guilty in a special court-martial also here May 29 and sentenced by a judge alone.

Airman First Class Robert Slentz was found guilty of wrongfully using drugs, to include marijuana and mushrooms containing psilocybin, unlawfully entering a dormitory room and disorderly conduct. Slentz was found in violation of three specifications under Article 112a of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and two specifications under Article 134 of the UCMJ.

Slentz was sentenced to confinement for three months, reduction to E-1 and a bad conduct discharge.

Financial hardship among airmen preventable

By Master Sgt. Ron Tull
Air Force Print News

The Air Force emphasizes financial awareness among its people following a recent survey showing hardship may be on the rise for airmen in grades E-3 through E-5.

The Web-based survey of 15,900 active-duty airmen in those grades was conducted in December 2000, said Shontelle Rivers, chief of financial programs for the Air Force family matters office in the Pentagon. She said the study revealed 42 percent of those responding reported difficulty in paying their bills.

"It's not just a matter of balancing the checkbook," she said. "It's a matter of being a smarter consumer. So we're trying to take a more proactive approach to educating airmen about options that are available while we try to develop new ones."

The survey shows personal debt among airmen increased by a third between 1996 and 2000. The situation may be even worse than reported, Rivers said, because the survey does not include home or car loans.

According to Bill Triplett, Spangdahlem Air Base personal financial counselor, impulse buying is one way some base members get deep into debt.

"I see individuals who can be talked into buying anything," he said. "I also see people who don't plan or set financial goals. They spend until it's gone and don't save for the large purchases."

The Air Force is promoting financial wellness in part by encouraging supervisors to emphasize the "Financial Responsibility" section on the Performance Feedback Worksheet.

"That block has always been there, and it's a good mentoring opportunity to head off any problems, as well as a

Personal financial planning 101

Getting financially fit is simple and available free of charge at the base family support center personal finance office.

"The most difficult part is the first step – recognizing that things just aren't the way you want them to be and you want more out of you money," said Bill Triplett, Spangdahlem Air Base personal financial counselor.

1. Make a financial counseling appointment by calling 452-6422. Bring in a copy of a recent Leave and Earning Statement, bills and other earnings.

2. At counseling, Triplett helps airmen develop a spending plan that fits their personal situation. If necessary a Power Pay plan will be developed, so airmen can shorten the time it takes to get out of debt. Also, Triplett can develop a customized savings plan, to help airmen achieve their financial goals.

3. Attend financial classes on the various subjects needed. Triplett offers monthly classes on money management, basic investing, picking mutual funds and more.

chance to link financial responsibility with readiness," Rivers said.

Debt levels of junior airmen are similar to those of their civilian counterparts, according to the survey. But Rivers points out permanent change-of-station moves, temporary duty assignments and deployments move can quickly change an airmen's debt-to-income ratio.

"If airmen aren't financially prepared, they are less likely to be concentrating on their military mission, which is our whole purpose for being here," she said.

Credit is where problems often start, Rivers said. The survey showed 38 percent of the airmen responding carried more than $10,000 dollars in unsecured debt.

Loan offices located near military bases usually offer short-term, high-interest payday loans. Most airmen are wise enough to stay away from those types of establishments, but not always, Rivers said. The lure of "easy money" to purchase high-dollar items today and worry about paying it off later seems to be the problem.

"We want airmen to know there's a better way to do business," she said. "That's why we stress the importance of consumer education. There's a tendency to buy on credit when it may be better to save up to buy something."

Triplett suggests airmen improve their financial outlook by setting immediate, intermediate and long-term goals.

"Post the list somewhere in the home where you can see it daily as a reminder of what your working and sacrificing for," he said.

Also, be aware of where the paycheck is going and make changes in spending when it conflicts with your goals, Triplett advises.

"If a change in the spending isn't possible, then a change in the goals is a must," he said.

Finally, everyone – regardless of your income level – should create an emergency reserve to fall back on when the unforeseen happens, said the financial counselor.

Rivers said in addition to personal counseling, financial advice is also available on the Air Force Crossroads Web site at www.afcrossroads.com.

Rumsfeld

Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld animates a point with hand gestures during a speech thanking the international airmen at NATO Air Base Geilenkirchen.

a promise of the U.S. helping Europe ... that it would be first invoked not for that purpose, but so that Europe could assist the United States," Rumsfeld said.

For more than seven months, about 800 people from "GK" took part in Operation Eagle Assist, with about 200 at a time in the United States. While there, they flew more than 360 sorties logging more than 4,300 flying hours.

During his base visit, the secretary spoke to a crowd of about 600 international airmen and civilians and presented a Joint Meritorious Unit Award. The award includes the 470th Air Base Squadron assigned there as well, according to a senior U.S. Navy officer accompanying Rumsfeld in response to a question from the crowd.

"I thank each of you for your courage, your dedication ... which you demonstrate every day, but especially for your contributions to America's defense in a time of need," Rumsfeld said following the presentation. "You are allies in the truest sense of the word and the American people are grateful to each one of you."

After accepting the citation accompanying the award of the joint decoration, U.S. Air Force Maj. Gen. Gary Winterberger, component commander, said his unit didn't see defending the United States as a job, but rather as an obligation.

"We looked at it as a personal obligation, a national obligation and an international obligation," the general said.

While members of the crowd agreed it was an obligation, they felt honored the defense secretary would personally deliver a thank you.

"What an honor ... certainly once in a lifetime, especially for an NCO," said U.S. Air Force Staff Sgt. Irene Griffith, an information manager with the NATO unit and who spent five weeks supporting Operation Eagle Assist. "His words were inspirational."

H. Wayne Hill, the family support center director for GK, was onboard a commercial aircraft Sept. 11, destined for his job at Geilenkirchen. He was immediately thrust into action supporting family members there.

"How special for someone that high in the food chain to personally deliver his message and the (citation) in person," he said. "I know people here really appreciate that he would come to little GK instead of sending a letter."

Before traveling to the base, the secretary stopped in London to meet with British Secretary of State for Defense Geoffrey Hoon, then to Brussels, Belgium, to attend multilateral NATO defense ministerial meetings, including the first NATO-Russia Committee talks, said a senior defense official.

After the visit to GK, Rumsfeld scheduled stops in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, all nations hoping to one day join the alliance. From there, the defense official said, the secretary plans to meet with senior defense officials in India and Pakistan to help smooth relations between the two skirmishing countries. Airfield operations lands Air Force award

Commander credits 'back-to-basics' movement for guiding flight into winning formation

By Staff Sgt. Jennifer Lindsey
52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

Air Force officials recently named the Spangdahlem Air Base airfield operations flight the best in the service and its commander, Capt. Rick Ricker, as airfield officer of the year.

Gaining that type of prestige is quite a feat because it requires an all-or-none attitude from all three of the airfield operations units, said the flight commander.

"We're very good at what we do," he said. "I attribute our success to three things: high-quality people, strong leadership and lateral support. Our people are the best I've ever worked with. I let chief controllers do their job and they've never let me down."

According to Ricker, airfield operations members set their sights on landing the team award more than a year ago when unit chiefs joined forces in a "back-to-basics" movement. The goal was to bring the flight's three agencies – airfield management, control tower and ground approach – together as one organization, he explained. Getting back to basics, such as maintaining military professional standards on- and off-duty, guided the flight back to high performance standards and Air Force recognition.

Last year, in addition to the flight's mission of orchestrating the take-off and landing of about 35 aircraft daily, the flight also flawlessly deployed more than 250 aircraft in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

Clear, open lines of communications are what made the high-operations tempo work without a glitch, said Senior Master Sgt. Frederick Soechting, air traffic control chief.

"Most places you go you have the airfield operations complex – all the facilities are separated from one another," he said. "Here I think we're an airfield operations team. I've never had a relationship with base operations folks like we have here. This is because we all get together and speak openly about issues."

Staff Sgt. Jennifer Lindsey

Throughout 2001, the flight also managed 20 airfield construction projects worth more than $18 million, in addition to assisting planning for the $158 million Rhein-Main transition program.

"Every time we have to close a taxiway, we have to notify air traffic control so they'll know how to direct the traffic," explained Master Sgt. Anthony Bunch, airfield manager. "An important part of our job is finding ways to minimize the impact on flight operations by phasing construction projects and relaying the information to the fighter squadrons."

"Back to basics" has also inspired the flight's aggressive training program, credited with 44 position certifications and 16 facility ratings within the year. To reach such numbers, unit chiefs maintained a stringent training program, which piggy-backed off of technical school training.

Because the job is so demanding, only about two-thirds of the airmen who apply for control tower and ground control approach positions make it through technical school, said Senior Master Sgt. Clint Bateman, ground control approach chief. Then, upon arrival to Spangdahlem AB, new airmen undergo daily simulator training and book study until they prove their proficiency.

Airman Scott Simmons, ground control operator and trainer, went through such training and said although it's tough, he agrees it's effective in preparing new controllers for real-world job pressures.

In their job, ground controllers have about two minutes to guide F-16 pilots flying at about 150 knots at 15 miles out from the base in for safe landing. Clear, precise communications is essential, Simmons said. Constant practice and testing are the only ways to learn how to stay cool under pressure.

Throughout 2001, the flight has garnered 13 awards as prestigious as the Commander-in-Chief Installation Excellence, Special Recognition Award.

"We have a saying, 'The fun never ends here because there's always something going on,'" said the flight commander. "It's a daily challenge, because there's so much going on here. There isn't a day that doesn't go by we're not coordinating a construction project, dealing with air traffic control issues, trying to get feedback from pilots or tweaking our operations to optimize our efficiency and provide the safest service possible."

Bitburg grads bid farewell to high school years

Compiled from staff reports

Bitburg High School held its graduation ceremony June 7 in Hangar 1.

Alexys R. Maxwell received top honors from Bitburg American High School Class of 2002.

During the June 7 graduation ceremony in Hangar 1, the daughter of Lt. Col. Keith Maxwell, 52nd Fighter Wing Transition Office, gave the graduation speech as the class valedictorian.

At a recognition ceremony held earlier in June, Kara L. Carline, Travis R. Carr, Jennifer R. Coleman, Ashley E. Cox, Rowena L. J. Cutaran, John J. Heppe, Heather M. Huguen, Maxwell, Holly N. McClure, Chad D. Pumbo, Kayla M. Swenson and Kristi S. Wilding were named the BHS Scholarship Association scholarship recipients.

Maxwell also received a scholarship from Mary Washington College and Carline earned a Texas A&M Academic Achievement scholarship. McClure received one from the Explosive Ordnance Disposal Memorial Committee. Pumbo, gained an Air Force ROTC scholarship and an appointment to U.S. Air Force Academy. Wilding earned a scholarship from Ricks College.

Pay yourself first

Investing today can pay off tomorrow

By Master Sgt. Russell Carnahan
52nd Mission Support Squadron first sergeant

I have always been told you should pay yourself first, but what about those credit card bills tacking on an 18-percent finance charge to my bill? Shouldn't I pay them off first? I suggest you pay yourself first.

Here's the scoop:

If you owe $10,000 and you wanted to get it paid off in five years, your consistent monthly payment for five years would be about $254. At an 18-percent finance charge, it will cost about $15,235 to pay the debt. The total interest you pay comes to about $5,235. If you add $40 monthly to the payment, it would still cost roughly $14,108 to pay it off. Only a $1,127 dent in the bill.

Instead of adding another $40 monthly to paying off the credit card bill, here's an alternative. Pay yourself first.

If a 25-year-old invests $10 weekly in a fund earning 10-percent interest annually, when the investor turns 65, the $520 investment will have grown to more than $20,000. If the investor continues the same investment for five years with a total of $2,600 invested, at age 65, he or she will have earned more than $90,000.

The sad fact is, too often, there's more motivation to pay rent than investing in the future. Most of us would live on Spagettios and Ramen noodles to make sure we pay our commitments to others, but not to ourselves.

The Thrift Savings Plan (or any retirement fund) is a good way to help you make a commitment to pay yourself first for a more secure future.

Leadership

Squadron commander shares top-10 words of wisdom

By Lt. Col. John Sieverling
308th Fighter Squadron commander

LUKE AIR FORCE BASE, Ariz. — What better way to explain what leadership means than by sharing my "Top 10 List" of quotes that have left a lasting impression on me through 10 assignments and 18 years of military service.

10. "Take care of your people, and they'll take care of you."

I'm not sure who came up with this early version of "putting people first." It should be rather obvious, but too many superiors, myself included at times, spend too much time passing e-mail back and forth instead of getting out of the office and personally interacting with people. Loyalty and trust work both ways.

9. "If mama ain't happy, ain't nobody happy."

Yes, this is a leadership quote, even if I read it on my mother-in-law's potholder. The obligations of military duty often conflict with achieving marital bliss, but take every opportunity to make sure your significant other is enjoying the ride. Also, a quick "How's it going?" phone call to a deployed member's spouse will do more for retention than you will ever know.

8. "A good plan, violently executed now, is better than a perfect plan next week."

Gen. George S. Patton Jr. was obviously speaking in terms of land combat, but I contend this certainly applies in peacetime as well. Nothing can be more frustrating than waiting days or weeks for the boss to make that perfect decision. Get the best information available, make the call and move ahead.

7. "Treat others like you want to be treated."

A famous Jewish carpenter said this more than 2,000 years ago, but the "Golden Rule" holds true in leadership situations as well. When you think that your rank permits you to be rude or disrespectful, please seek alternative ... too many superiors, myself included at times, spend too much time passing e-mail back and forth instead of getting out of the office and personally interacting with people. Loyalty and trust work both ways.

employment — you are now demanding respect instead of commanding it. That sucking sound was your departing credibility.

6. "Never tell people how to do things. Tell them what to do and they will surprise you with their ingenuity."

This is Patton's ultimate anti-micromanagement quote. Although it's often easier to tell your subordinates exactly how to do a particular task, who says you know the smartest way to do it? Micromanagement stifles initiative and kills motivation. The folks in the trenches know the best way, so practice "centralized control and decentralized execution" and get out of the way.

5. "You don't get promoted; your records do."

I'm not sure when I first heard this one, but it makes enormous sense. Your subordinate may, in fact, be the sharpest officer or NCO meeting that board, but if his or her records don't say so, too bad. Individually, make sure your records are error-free months before that board convenes.

4. "You catch more flies with honey than vinegar."

I've seen too many junior NCOs and officers try to use their rank to solve problems instead of using kindergarten basics like courtesy and respect. While you don't have to "sell" your guidance, there is no reason to immediately pull rank or talk down to a subordinate. Always reach for the carrot first; use the stick only as a last resort.

3. "When the eagles are silent, the parrots will begin to jabber."

Winston Churchill offered some great advice to those in leadership positions: glaring problems in your unit won't go away by ignoring them and get worse as the rumor mill cranks up. Know what your airmen are concerned about and confront those issues head-on, however unpleasant it may be.

2. "Be an example to your men in your duty and in private life. Never spare yourself and let the troops see that you don't in your endurance of fatigue and privation. Always be tactful and well-mannered, and teach your subordinates to be the same. Avoid excessive sharpness or harshness of voice, which usually indicates the man who has shortcomings of his own to hide."

I wasn't too fond of this long quote I had to memorize 22 years ago at the Air Force Academy, but here, Field Marshall Erwin Rommel puts leadership by example in a nutshell. Enough said.

1. "The three Fs of priorities: Faith, Family, and Air Force."

Not many commanders will say your job comes in third place behind your relatives and your spiritual health, but I contend this is the proper priority for a successful Air Force career of any length. Ask any former Prisoner of War what carried them through their ordeal. If you are not actively growing in your faith, please visit your local chaplain or place of worship as soon as possible — there is nothing more important. Visitors of the "Five Times the Roman Experience in Trier" program tour the city Kaiserthermen. The city and state sponsored program was developed to entice visitors to actually go inside the monuments and walk around. The program includes guided tours for those interested in more facts and historical perspectives.

Trier : Five Roman monuments, one memorable experience

By Major Francisco G. Hamm
52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

They came, they bathed and they conquered. Two thousand years after the Romans discovered Trier, five ruins representing their opulent glory continue to capture the imaginations of 4 million visitors annually who journey to this metropolis by the Mosel.

Known as the capital of the Roman Empire, north of the Alps, Trier was named Augusta Treverorum, "City of Augustus in the territory of Treveri," in 16 B.C. by the Romans and as the oldest city in Germany, it is like no other German city influenced by Roman culture. Although luscious grapes and delicious wines are synonymous with Trier, it's the Roman treasures sprinkled throughout the city that truly give the city its character and its influence.

A new program called "Five Times the Roman Experience in Trier" looks to assist visitors who are interested in learning more about Trier's Roman heritage and garner a different perspective through close-up study of the five main ruins and monuments that dart the city.

The city is loaded with Roman ruins and some yet to be unearthed, as it was discovered in the late 1980's. During excavations for a downtown parking garage for a local bank in 1987, the city discovered ties to pre-historic times. The Forum baths were uncovered, dating back to 50 B.C. when Caesar's legionnaires had reached the area and shortly afterwards, in about 17 B.C., the city of the Mighty Augustus in the land of the Treverer — Augusta Treverorum — came into being. The Romans held sway here for more than five centuries.

This Roman ruin, the Thermen am Viehmarkt (Forum Baths), is now one of the five Roman ruins or monument part of this program. The other four include the city's landmark, the Porta Nigra (Black Gate), the Amphitheater, the Barbarathermen (Foundations of the Barbara baths) and the Kaiserthermen (Imperial baths).

Ticket for the "Five Times" tour in euro cost 14.80 for a family of four, 6.20 for adults, 3.10 for youth and 2.50 for children. The tour runs now through Nov. 3.

In conjunction with the "Five Times" program, the city also provides the Trier Tour bus service, available specifically to view Trier's historic sights, including the five monuments.

The bus service provides easy transportation to all five monuments and is good for all day from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. The busses run every 30 minutes at each monument location are air-conditioned and provide panorama views.

For those that want to see the city first and then view the monuments all at once, this is an excellent way; you can stay on the bus for a round-trip tour lasting about one hour. Then you can take the bus to your first monument. The Trier Tour bus ticket is also good all day for city buses.

Tour bus tickets in euro cost 5.60 for adults and 2.80 for children.

In the end, combining these two programs makes for a full daytrip. Nowhere else in Germany can the influence of the Roman era be captured better than in Trier and with this "Five Times" adventure.

Five sites facts

■Porta Nigra (Black Gate) — Roman city gate from the 2nd century A.D., greatest preserved castle gateway from Roman times. Today, it serves as Trier's landmark.

■The Amphitheater — The arena, built around 100 A.D., for cruel games with gladiators and animals, had a seating capacity of 20,000. Below the area you go though is a large cellar where the gladiators and animals were held during the games.

■Barbarathermen (Foundations of the Barbara baths) — The foundations, cellar service tunnels and remains of the hollow floor heating system have survived. Built in the 2nd century A.D.

■Thermen am Viehmarkt (Forum Baths) — Results of excavations from 1987-1994 and are shown under a glass superstructure by Oswald M. Ungers: massive foundations of a Roman bath, medieval waste pits and cellar rooms of the baroque Capucin monastery.

■Kaiserthermen (Imperial Baths) — The Roman Imperial palace from the fourth century had warm and cold baths as well as a sports ground.
